CHARLES HAUGHEY

Charles Haughey is widely recognized as a gifted leader but leadership is only one aspect of his multi-faceted genius. Interested in the sciences, sympathetic towards the Arts, he has a broad and deep understanding of culture. He is serious but not solemn, persistent but never dull, confident in himself and a source of endless fascination to others. He is charming, proud, shrewd, witty, eloquent when he wants to be. And at sixty-four years of age he is, in his responses and outlook, the youngest man in Irish politics.

This is his tenth year as leader of Fianna Fáil. He is a great leader, at once adventurous and wise, showing impressive resilience at moments of crisis, restraint under pressure, and never losing his genius for asserting himself and inspiring others. After ten years of leading the Party it seems appropriate that he should now be on the threshold of becoming President of the European Community.

"Ta Charlie ag dul in óige!" a Dingleman said to me. I would agree. Charles Haughey has that quality which great athletes and artists have - belief in the intrinsic ability and value of the self. This is the true source of tolerance, humour and commonsense.

This belief gives him a certain ferocity. It makes him a genuine friend, a genuine opponent. It cultivates a pristine clarity of mind, of intention and execution. It endows him with real presence, no matter where he is. Like a great actor whose very silence is a powerful dramatic statement, Haughey dominates the stage of Irish consciousness with powerful effect.

He will do so for a long time to come. And why wouldn't he?

PROFILE

Charles Haughey, ten years leader of Fianna Fáil and in his fourth term as Taoiseach, is the principal architect of Ireland's spectacular national economic recovery since 1987.

Born in Castlebar in 1925 of Derry parents, he was brought up in Dublin and educated at Scoil Josef Marino, St Joseph's C.B.S. Fairveiw, and UCD. He was a winner of a Dublin Senior Football Medal, and rose to the rank of Lieutenant in the FCA. He founded the Haughey Boland Accountancy practice. He married Maureen Lemass in 1951 and they have three sons and a daughter. The youngest son, Senator Séan Haughey is Lord Mayor of Dublin.

Charles Haughey was first elected to the Dáil in 1957. In 1961 he was appointed Minister for Justice, and instigated an ambitious programme of law reform, including the Succession Act and the abolition of the death penalty for all but a small number of cases. As Minister for Agriculture from 1964-66 he negotiated much of the Anglo Irish Free Trade Area Agreement. As Minister for Finance from 1966-70 he was involved in early discussions on EEC membership, and introduced the free travel scheme for the old, and income tax relief for writers and artists. From 1977-79 he was Minister for Health and Social Welfare, and introduced health education programmes, controls on tobacco advertising and promotion, as well as embarking on a major hospital building programme.

As Taoiseach in the early 1980's Mr Haughey initiated important investment programmes to modernise Ireland's infrastructure. He also succeeded in placing the Northern Ireland problem in a new context, and created with the British Prime Minister the Anglo-Irish process. He reasserted Ireland's independent foreign policy tradition. In the mid 1980's he made a major contribution to the work of the New Ireland Forum. A Brilliant parliamentarian he provided vigorous opposition to the narrowly based and ineffective economic policies of the Fine Gael-Labour Coalition Government. Fianna Fail during that period won bye-elections, European elections and Local elections.

Returned to office in 1987 Charles Haughey and his Ministers tackled successfully the huge problems in the public finances, restored confidence, investment and growth after years of stagnation and decline. He negotiated the Programme for National Recovery with the social partners, trade unions, employers and farmers, and began to turn round the unemployment situation with employment growing significantly for the first time in the 1980's. He also succeeded in winning for Ireland a doubling of the EC Structural Funds. He has forged new and closer partnerships in Europe with the EC Commission, President Jacques Delors, with President Mitterrand, and he has also developed economic relations with countries like Australia, Japan, and with the Soviet Union following his meeting with President Gorbachev at Shannon in April. In January 1990 he becomes President in Office of the European Community.

Charles Haughey is also well known for his social concern, his patronage of the Arts, his interest in sport and for his involvement in virtually every aspect of Irish life. His outstanding leadership qualities, his many important achievements and his service to the Irish people are today generally recognised and acknowledged.
